

Doctor as patient: Severe Preclampsia

Akunna I

Kent, Surrey & Sussex Deanery, United Kingdom, United Kingdom

Objective

To share the personal experience of Preclampsia, as a doctor in this field.

Methods

Personal account Narrative.

Results

Preclampsia is a life threatening condition, which increases maternal and fetal mortality and morbidity risk. However, when managed appropriately leads to both positive maternal and fetal outcome.

Conclusion

As an Obstetrician and Gynaecologist doctor who suffered from severe Preclampsia, I have gained more in depth understanding of the disease. How it affects the individual from diagnosis to delivery.
